November Newsletter

I'm not sure how it got to be November already but since Halloween is over I am certain it is. Things in our room are moving right along. This month we start off learning about our bones and bodies then talk about the five senses. There will also be talk about Turkeys, Thanksgiving and the Pilgrims and American Indians, and of course, why we are grateful.

During the first week of November 9, Terry will be meeting with each of you for parent/teacher conferences. Please try to be prompt for the meeting. I ask that at least one parent come, thank you for signing up already, any changes to the google document please message me.

The Thanksgiving "festivities" will be on Wednesday, November 25, for the children. This year may present some difference in food preparation so I will update as it gets closer.

Please feel free at any time to send in a "special" snack with your child...individually wrapped items only. They always enjoy it and they get a "thanks" from the class as well.

Keep in mind with the weather getting cooler, that we go outside each day (unless it's raining) so the children should be prepared with warm apparel and hats and gloves when necessary. It is also a good time to send in warmer spare clothes in case of need to change. Please consider durable shoes/ boots for squishy yard.

The attached Scholastic orders are due by Nov.12. It's a good time to think about the gift of reading with as the holidays are coming ;). Thanks to everyone who has ordered online. If you order gifts just let me know to "hide" them from kids.

I know I keep saying this but our kiddos are really doing well and I am so proud of all the adults as well!
